LOBSTERS GROWN IN STATE HATCHERY

Great Success of the Rhode Island Experiment Is Likely to Be Emulated Along the Atlantic Coast.

REPUBLIC SPECIAL.

New York, May 27.—Lobsters are being propagated artificially by the thousands. The threatened extinction of one of our most valuable fishing industries is positively arrested, and the future preservation of this delicious crustacean is now assured. This notable discovery of vast economic and scientific importance to the United States, and likewise to the whole world, has been conclusively demonstrated by the successful experiments carried on by Doctor A. D. Mead of Brown University, on behalf of the Rhode Island Commission of Inland Fisheries.

In these experiments a 50 per cent hatch has been obtained. In summering contrast to this is the estimate that not more than one out of two thousand eggs deposited in the natural manner in the waters is reared and ever reaches full development, as they become helpless prey and are swallowed up by all sorts of marine creatures. The largest number of "volunteers" raised to the fourth or mature stage for one time was 12,500. The government will soon establish a series of hatcheries, operated on the same scale as the Wickford, one, at various points along the coast.

In these millions of young lobsters will be reared up to a point where they can take care of themselves and then be released to the waters. With increased production, the present luxurious dish of a broiled lobster will be the near future be within the reach of a man with a small purse. For a number of years it has been apparent to the United States Fish Commission that unless some effective plans were put into effect for utilizing human aid by the lobster hatcheries, whereby the young fry could be brought to maturity and then released in the waters, the lobster would completely disappear from our shores. Specimens were set to work at the Wickford Experimental Station of the Rhode Island Fish Commission, where most suitable environment existed and special apparatus could be devised and installed.

The hatchery operations the last summer were conducted on a houseboat some fifty feet long. Two large floats on both sides of the craft contained the essential apparatus for breeding and rearing the young fry from the eggs during the critical four stages of two to three weeks which are necessary before they become strong enough to be released into the water. The hatchery was divided into two main parts, one for the young fry and the other for the mature lobsters. The young fry were kept in a large tank, and the mature lobsters were kept in a smaller tank. The water in the tanks was kept at a constant temperature, and the young fry were fed with special food.

USING HER TALENTS.

The not misanthropic actress believes it is her privilege to make use of it in the highest sense. But I do not believe it wisdom for a woman who does not have to do so to go through the hard training necessary to keep the pot boiling. If she is a woman of talent and means she could get so much more pleasure out of her work by educating herself and cultivating her talent for the highest, and then, if necessary, demands that she take her place with the professionals, she is saved the tribulation.

"Simply because a woman has means, I do not mean to say she should let her talent lie dormant. She should cultivate them for the pleasure they would afford herself and her friends.

"Even if she will remain in the shelter of her home as long as she can, contact with the world cannot help but make a woman better. She should have to keep up a constant fight with herself to keep from becoming cynical. Every day she should be reminded that she is a woman, and that she should be a woman of the world, and not a woman of the house.

"So much from the young woman without theories, so much from the young woman who has been successful on the stage, who speaks from experience and not theory, and who takes life as she finds it.

DEATH DUE TO BROKEN HEART.

Husband Died Before Wife, Believing She Could Not Recover.

REPUBLIC SPECIAL.
New York, May 27.—While the body of their father was being taken from their home, No. 62 East One Hundred and Thirty-fourth street, word was received by the children of John Lally that their mother had just died in St. Luke's Hospital, where she had been removed while ill that she might not learn of the death of her husband.

Mr. Lally was a former official of the Greenwich Fire Insurance Company, wealthy and prominent in Harlem. He was 41 years old. The children, until now, and daughters, are grown, and when Mr. Lally was found dead it was decided that it would be best to have the mother go to the hospital, an operation being necessary. She consented, and was removed in ignorance of the fact that her husband was lying dead in the house.

The children visited her in the hospital, and when she questioned them about Mr. Lally, wanting to know why he had not called to see her, they made evasive replies. The day following, when they called, the young women put on their gay dresses that she might not suspect the truth.

Mr. Lally was operated upon, and while the funeral cortege was before the house word came of her death. Her body replaced that of her husband in the parlor of the home a few hours later.

The family believe Mr. Lally's death was due to a broken heart, he realizing that his wife could not survive the operation he knew she must undergo. The physicians say he died of apoplexy.

MILLION DOLLAR MANSION
ALLOWED TO GO TO RUIN.

Roof of Rhineland-Waldo House.

In New York, Crumbles in-Rick Paintings and Art Work.

REPUBLIC SPECIAL.

New York, May 27.—The Rhineland-Waldo mansion on the corner of Madison avenue and Seventy-second street, that has in its time caused more passing comment than any other residence in the city has been sold. It is said that Mrs. Getty Barker, who owned the place, had decided to sell it, and that the purchase had been made by a syndicate of investors.

The house, which was diagonally opposite the residence of Louis Tiffany, is a masterpiece of architecture. It was built in 1880, but has since become a ruin. The roof has crumbled in, and the walls are falling away. The house is now a shell, and is allowed to go to ruin.

During the building of the house, which is in the romantic style of architecture, the walls and roof were in danger, and when they returned the owner found that the walls and roof were in danger. The house is now a shell, and is allowed to go to ruin.

Since the death of his wife, not only has the house been allowed to go to ruin, but the owner has been allowed to go to ruin. The house is now a shell, and is allowed to go to ruin.

BLOOD POISON MAN'S GREATEST ENEMY

The disease that has done more than any other to wreck, ruin and humiliate life is Contagious Blood Poison. Sorrow, shame and suffering go hand in hand with this great enemy, and man has always hated and fought it as he has no other disease. It is the most powerful of all poisons; no matter how pure the blood may be, when its virus enters, the entire circulation becomes poisoned and its chain of horrible symptoms begin to show. Usually the first sign is a small sore or ulcer, not at all alarming in appearance, but the blood is being saturated with the deadly poison, and soon the mouth and throat begin to ulcerate, the hair and eyebrows drop out, a red eruption breaks out on the body, copper-colored spots appear on the face and attacks the appearance and the poison even works down into the bones and attacks the nerves. Not only is the disease hereditary, being transmitted from parent to child, in the form of scrofula, weak eyes, soft bones, weak, puny constitutions, etc., but is also so highly contagious that many a life has been ruined by a friendly hand shake, from using the toilet articles of one infected with the poison. To cure this blighting, deadly curse do it so quickly and surely as S. S. S. It goes down to the very bottom of the trouble, drives out every particle of the poison and makes the blood clean and strong. It does not hide or cover up anything, but from the first begins to expel the poison and build up and strengthen the system. S. S. S. is guaranteed purely vegetable. We offer a reward of $1.00 for proof that it contains a particle of mineral of any kind. Book on the disease, with instructions for home treatment, and any advice desired, without charge.
